SUNDAY CRIME BREEDERS

The open saloons and the selling of liquor on Sunday brought about two killings and one stabbing affray. Whenever the saloons in Memphis are permitted to run wide open a Sunday that day is usually marked with affrays, some of which culminate in murder.

The [illegible] open saloon is a breeder of [illegible] man on Sunday finding the places open will [illegible] spend [illegible] of [illegible] them [illegible] around [illegible] saloon [illegible] drinking [illegible]

If the saloons on Sunday are breeding places for crime the responsibility for that crime is on those who permit them to remain open.

If men are given opportunities to get drunk and shoot and cut on Sunday the stain of their murders is upon those who control Memphis.

There is a city ordinance against Sunday saloons and for the sake of decency let it be enforced.

This is no political play—it is simply a demand that things provocative of murder and other crime be eliminated.

The commission [illegible] can close the saloons and dives on Sunday. Let them do it.—Commercial Appeal.

HAVE HIGH IDEALS.

[illegible] the Standard You Raise Depends Your Future Career

What we make of ourselves depends upon the ideals which we habitually hold. Our lives are shaped upon our mental models. If these be high the life is lofty; if low it grovels. Man is no better than his ideals. The stream cannot rise higher than its source. Our work can never overtop our ideal, our ambition. It is a great thing to keep the constant suggestion of high ideals of things that are [illegible] and noble in human achievement in the mind. It tends to [illegible] love the right and hate the wrong. There is one thing we ought to hold in such sacredness that no consideration could induce us to dilute it, and that is the quality of the life, the quality of our ideals. Whatever else we are careless about we cannot afford to carry through life low ideals, second class personalities or demoralizing mentalities. However humble our home [illegible] or lowly our environment, we should keep the quality of the life, the personality, at the highest possible standard. We should allow nothing to deteriorate it.

Yet most people are careless and indifferent regarding the quality of their lives. There is a slipshodness in their living, a slovenliness in their mentality which tends to deteriorate the quality of the life and make it cheap and commonplace.

Whatever your career, guard your ideal as the apple of your eye, the pearl of great price, for everything depends upon the direction in which that points. If it points downward no amount of money or influence can redeem you from mediocrity or even save you from a degraded life. Man is so made that he must follow his ideal. He cannot go up if his ideal points down. —Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine

Human Ear a Deformity

"While the ears of animals," said a naturalist, "are erect and comely, the human ear is crumpled, crushed and flattened. It is man's intelligence that is responsible for the deformity of his ear. Man's brain, you see, has made his head too heavy. An animal's neck alone furnishes enough support in sleep, but man's neck is too weak to sustain his brain weighted skull, which in consequence must be laid, with the ear underneath, upon a pillow. Man, I have no doubt, had an erect, smooth, shapely ear in the beginning, but his head, with its developing brain, outgrew his neck's power to support it. Thence came the head rest or pillow, with its consequent crushing and crumpling of the ear, and thence came the ear of today—a deformity which, being universal, is not deemed a deformity at all."

Story of Duruy and Pasteur

Victor Duruy, the French historian, was also minister of education under Napoleon III. One day he and Pasteur shared a cab to drive to the Institute de France and Duruy proposed to pay. "No change," said the cabman when tendered a five franc piece. "No matter," replied Duruy. "Keep the coin as a souvenir of the fact that you have today driven the greatest man of science in France."

A successful man of the self made variety, having purchased a fine library by the foot, was showing it with some pride to a friend of literary attainments. The self made man ran his business on the card index system and his library with the same degree of method. Cases were marked plainly "Travel," "Art," "Poetry," "Science." Occupying a prominent place in the "Travel" case the friend noticed a handsome volume with the title in gold letters on the back, "Alice in Wonderland."—Youth's Companion.

TRADE DOLLARS.

Authorized In 1873 and Demonetized by the Act of 1887.

A trade dollar is slightly larger than a standard dollar, but it is not current coin, and its metal value is only about 40 cents, though coin collectors will pay 80 cents for it.

So many of these mongrel dollars were in circulation a generation ago that most persons were watchful to avoid getting one, but in recent years they have been so rare that many people never have seen one.

Trade dollars were authorized by congress in 1873 for the purpose of stimulating commerce with the orient. For many years the Mexican silver dollar had been a [illegible] used coin in nearly all far eastern countries. Hundreds of millions [illegible] to China, Japan, the Philippines and other countries in that part of the world to pay for the products exported from there to Europe and the United States.

American lawmakers thought that a coin of practically the same weight and size as the Mexican dollar bearing the imprint of the United States could be used advantageously as a substitute for the Mexican dollar.

In the five years beginning with 1873 the United States mint produced nearly 36,000,000 of these dollars. Most of them were exported, but enough of them remained in this country to be embarrassing because of their similarity to the standard silver dollar, and in 1887 congress provided that for six months thereafter all trade dollars presented to the treasury should be exchanged for standard silver dollars, and after that time the trade dollars were left to shift for themselves, being worth only their metal value plus whatever premium coin collectors might be willing to pay for them. Nearly 8,000,000 of them were redeemed, and when the period for redemption ended only 284,587 of them remained in this country, less than 1 per cent of the number that had been coined.

The trade dollars have on one side a sitting figure of the Goddess of Liberty and on the other an eagle of a different design from that on the standard dollar. The inscription is "United States of America, Trade Dollar, 420 grains, 900 fine."

The standard silver dollar weighs 412.5 grains. The weight of the Mexican dollar is 417.70 grains, but 97.27 per cent of it is pure silver, so that though it weighs less its metal value is about 7 per cent more than that of the old trade dollar. Probably this is the reason that the trade dollar never made a hit with the people of the far east. There is ground for suspicion that the originators of the trade dollar thought the orientals might be duped into taking it in preference to the Mexican dollar because of its slightly greater weight, notwithstanding the fact that its silver value was about 7 per cent less. But the oriental money changers quickly learned this difference in value, and the deception wouldn't work.

The trade dollar was authorized by the coinage act which became famous under the designation of "the crime of '73" in the free silver agitation which began a few years later and continued for more than twenty years.—Kansas City Star.

Dashed His Hopes.

At a reception at the Tuileries the Emperor Napoleon III. asked Edmund About if he knew Spanish. About, who had been long sighing for an important diplomatic post, answered prudently, "Not yet, sire." But the very next day he went hard to work to learn it, and a few months later he said to the emperor, "Sire, I can speak Spanish now." Though the sovereign seemed rather surprised, About continued, nothing daunted, "I have learned Spanish because your majesty asked me if I could speak that language." "Ah, yes," answered Napoleon. "I remember now. I had just been reading 'Don Quixote' in the original and had taken great pleasure in it."

A Long Walk.

A professor of the University of Pennsylvania who has greatly endeared himself to the students on account of his kind heartedness has one particular failing—that of absentmindedness, the Philadelphia Times relates.

He visited his married nephew and had listened to the young wife's praise of her firstborn. The gentleman felt that he must say something to give the impression that he was interested.

"Can the dear little fellow walk?" he inquired quietly.

"Walk?" the mother shouted. "Why, he has been walking for five months!"

"Dear me!" the professor exclaimed, lapsing again into abstraction. "What a long way he must have got!"

ABSENTMINDED.

Men of Genius Whose Thoughts Were Wont to Wander Astray.

Absorption in their work is often carried to such extremes as to make men of genius strangely oblivious to what is going on around them. Many amusing stories are told illustrative of that tendency to "absentmindedness." According to Sir David Brewster, when Newton left a room to get anything he usually returned without it.

The physicist Rouelle was notoriously absentminded. One day while performing a laboratory experiment he said to his students:

"You see, gentlemen, this caldron over the flame? Well, if I were to cease stirring it an explosion would at once occur that would make us jump."

As he spoke he involuntarily ceased stirring, and his prediction was fulfilled. The explosion took place with a frightful noise, every window in the laboratory was broken, and Rouelle's audience fled wildly outside.

It is related of a gifted ecclesiastic, Bishop Munter, that, returning home and finding his door placarded with the announcement, "The master of the house is out," he calmly remained in front of the door, awaiting his own return.

Buxton, the mathematical prodigy, during a visit to London was taken to see Garrick in "King Richard III." Afterward, being asked how he liked the play, he said he really did not know what it had been about, as he had been too busy counting the words [illegible] the different actors and the number of times each went in and out.

Ampere in a moment of preoccupation penciled a problem on the back of a cab standing in the street and was vastly astonished when the starting of the cab caused his problem to disappear. Lombroso says that [illegible] the same thing happened to Gioja, who, in the excitement of composition, wrote a chapter on the top of his bureau instead of on paper.—Ainslee's Magazine.

A Promising Lad.

Miss Ellis, descending the steps of Bennett & Buck's hardware store, met Mrs. Lane going up. "What they got?" Mrs. Lane demanded in a tone that said, "Nothing much, I guess!"

"I didn't look round," replied Miss Ellis. "I knew what I wanted," holding out an ungainly bundle, "and I got it—a hand bellows for my fireplace.

"I went in, and Mary Baker's third—no; fourth—boy come right up to me and asked what he could show me. I told him hand bellowses. He brought some up and said they was a dollar.

"'Is that the best ye can do?' I asked him.

"'The very best,' he says, 'but I'll tell ye what I'll do, Miss Ellis,' he says. 'You don't look a very strengthy lady, and I'll fill it with wind for ye.'

"If you want concessions," concluded Miss Ellis, "I recommend ye to go to that boy."—Exchange.

Not His Cue.

One of Atlantic City's life guards was discussing his profession.

"Funny things happen to the guards sometimes," said Mr. Shrank. "A funny thing happened to my friend Tim last week. A society belle from Spruce street went into the water wearing one of these fashionable transformations or wigs. A big wave went over her, and when she came up the transformation was floating out to sea. She turned and ran to Tim.

"'Oh, save my hair!' she yelled. 'Save my hair!'

"'Pardon me, lady,' says Tim, 'I'm a life saver, not a hair restorer.'"—New York Press.

His Accomplishment.

A [illegible] who stuttered badly went to a specialist and after ten difficult lessons learned to say quite distinctly "Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers." His friends congratulated him upon this splendid achievement.

"Yes," said the man doubtfully, "but it's s-s-such a d-d-d-d-difficult remark to w-w-work into an ordin-n-nary c-c-conversation, y' know."

An Inopportune Remark.

All is not paradise aboard ship, first, because nobody is armor plate proof against seasickness. Old sea captains have been known to succumb to a cross sea in Saginaw bay. There is a malicious story of a captain who brought home a parrot as a gift to a lady friend, who complained that the bird knew nothing but the [illegible] of the forecastle. The captain promised to bring on his next voyage a bird which had never been allowed to go outside [illegible] —Boston Transcript.

A Costly Commission.

[illegible] trading [illegible] Yankees have had a reputation for being commercial. Few of them, however, are so eager for a bargain as this one, celebrated in the Louisville Times. He was touring the south for pleasure, but could not dislodge from his mind the customs and phrases of his business life.

"Here," said a guide to him one day, "right here in this room, sir, Washington received his first commission."

The Yankee brightened up.

"What per cent commission was it?" he asked.

A Witty Comment.

One night several years ago two young men were dining with two ladies at the Burnet house, in Cincinnati. The two ladies were members of Miss Marie Dressler's company, and Miss Dressler herself happened to be dining at the next table. As the party of four arose after dinner one of the men's sleeves brushed a glass from the table and it was shattered to bits on the marble floor. With a twinkle in her eyes Miss Dressler leaned toward him and said, "I beg your pardon; you've dropped the stone out of your ring."

The Way the Glass Sheets Are Cleaned, Coated and Sensitized

First of all the small sheet of glass destined to form the support for the sensitized film is carefully cleaned, so as to be ready [illegible] the preliminary coating upon which the sensitive film [illegible] be placed [illegible] are placed [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] of the other [illegible] with [illegible] plates are [illegible] placed on [illegible] and conveyed [illegible] Of course all these operations take place in [illegible] light.

The next operation [illegible] on an almost [illegible]

[illegible] results [illegible] of heat.

The bed of the machine is formed of a band [illegible] liquid by the application of heat. The plates are carried [illegible] endless band [illegible] along, an even film of the emulsion flows on to them. In the latter portion of their journey along the endless band they pass under a refrigerator, which cools the emulsion film and encourages the coating to set.

By the end of [illegible] the plates are separated during the journey. Finally they are taken to another set of drying rooms, the finished product being a white substance coated upon a plate of glass.

Of course the plates made use of by photographers are of different sizes. Hence the glass sheets pass through another machine in which guides are so fixed that the glass passes over a diamond point. This scratches each sheet so that it can be broken into the exact size of the "dry plates" which are sold in the photographic shops.—London Answers.

The Pill and the Coating

Joseph Savnlor the French historian, and Jules Sandeau, a novelist, made their meeting at a public reception the occasion for a dispute as to the respective places which they occupied in the world of letters.

"The reading of history is like a pill: it needs the sugar coating to make it palatable," argued the novelist.

"Ah, but it is the ingredient which cures, not the coating," remarked the historian.

"Then let us divide honors," said Sandeau, "for if it were not for my sugar coating your historical facts would dry on the shelves."

Microbes and Man

As a man grows older and learns things he is inclined to wonder how he escaped all the microbes he encountered in the days of his youth. But even if that consciousness makes him skeptical the scientists probably are right. The point is that a man or a boy in good physical condition, with plenty of fresh air and exercise, can whip a brigade of microbes without much trouble. It is only when he allows himself to run down that he becomes easy picking for the germs.

Chinese Nomads

In the plains on the western border of the Chinese empire in the heart of Asia there live roaming tribes who seldom visit towns except for trade. The dwellings are tents made of felt and usually low, small and round. The wooden door frame is no higher than half a window frame in English houses, but the tent, although not equal to the wants of a large family, is snug and comfortable in summer but cold in winter.—London Graphic.

The Reasons For Enlisting

Two soldiers were on picket together, relates the Ram's Horn, when one of them said:

"How did you come to enlist, Tom?"

"Well, I'll tell you how it was," said Tom. "You see, I didn't have any wife, and I liked war, and so I went into the army. But what made you enlist?"

"Well, I did have a wife and I liked peace, so I enlisted," returned the other.

CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Jane Callehan suffered from womanly trouble for nearly ten years. In a letter from Whiteville, N. C., she says: "I was not able to do my own housework. My stomach was weak, and my blood was wrong. I had backache, and was very weak. I tried several doctors, but they did me no good. I used Cardui for 3 or 4 months, and now I am in the best health I have ever been. I can never praise Cardui enough." It is the best tonic, for women.

Whether seriously sick, or simply weak, try Cardui.

HOMES OF THE BEAVERS.

Wonderful Work Achieved by These Clever Dam Builders

Beavers arrange their homes in a neighborly way to form villages and towns. It is pointed out that they are lake dwellers for the same reason that early races of men lived over the water. The chief difference between the two, however, is that man built over natural ponds, whereas the beaver makes a pond where he happens to want it. The labors of no other animal on earth, aside from man, present so many interesting phases as those of the beaver.

According to Macoun, who has made m[illegible] studies [illegible] these little [illegible] beavers [illegible] to build villages. Houses, [illegible] of two floors, bear witness to the uniform genius of their architects. The pantry occupies the ground floor, but the upper floors of the beaver's domicile are reserved for his hours of sleep and leisure.

The walls and upper part are remarkably thick, sometimes measuring several feet. Then at the beginning of hard frost the exterior is coated with a thick layer of mud, which immediately freezes and has the double advantage of perfectly shutting out the cold air and of guarding against the attacks of wolverines.

The smartness of the beaver is also seen in the care it takes not only to lay in provisions in advance, but also in arranging deep holes to insure its retreat in case of surprise and for its subsistence in a day of need.

The most extraordinary works of the beaver are, of course, the dams that they throw across rivers and along the shores of lakes. In this matter they are qualified to rank with the best of engineers. Two points especially in their work attract attention, the first being the skill and strength displayed in the construction and the second being their unerring choice of the best materials.

In examining the construction of a beaver dam one is at once struck with its extreme simplicity. The wonder is how the mud, kneaded and applied by the beaver's paws, assisted by even the trowel shaped tail, becomes a hydraulic cement that time hardens instead of dissolves.

The [illegible] of the beaver's works is as [illegible] in their perfection. Some [illegible] and [illegible] ficial [illegible] their [illegible] extent [illegible] strik[illegible] of the beaver [illegible] must have [illegible] the plans and [illegible] produce the results [illegible] government [illegible] they must [illegible] of [illegible] veloped [illegible]pers Weekly.

OUR PRESIDENTS.

Only One Impeachment and but Two Resolutions of Censure

Andrew Johnson was the only president of the United States ever impeached, and on the trial before the senate he was acquitted, the vote in favor of conviction barely falling short of the necessary two-thirds.

Two resolutions of censure on the president have been passed, once by the senate and once by the house, on occasions when the hostile majority was not large enough either to pass measures over the president's veto or to impeach him.

The first was passed by the senate on March 28, 1834, censuring President Andrew Jackson for alleged violation of the constitution and laws by his removal of the government deposits from the United States bank. The majority of the senate was opposed to Jackson in his war upon that bank, and this vote of censure was the only thing they could do about it. Jackson protested against this resolution as a charge to answer which no opportunity could be afforded him. The senate refused to receive the protest. Finally on Jan. 16, 18[illegible] the resolution of censure was expunged from the journal of the senate.

The [illegible] resolution of censure was [illegible] by the house [illegible] which President [illegible] had [illegible] president [illegible] proper [illegible] of the veto power. Tyler protested against this as Jackson had done before him, but he had as a member of the senate voted against receiving Jackson's protest, and in answer to his protest the house sent him a copy of the senate resolution on the former occasion.

Making Pleasure Last

Time is a relative quantity. Some minutes seem like hours and some hours seem like minutes. How to control this flight is beyond most persons, but the little boy mentioned below seems to have progressed pretty well for a young fellow.

The teacher was surprised to see that he remained perfectly still all through recess and accordingly asked him why he did not play.

"Because," he said, "[illegible] makes recess too quick if I play, and I want it to last." — Cleveland Leader.

Independently Miserable

A day or two ago, having joined the boat train at Dover harbor station, the writer found a fellow passenger resting a heavy head on worried looking hands. The weather was quite pleasant, but one can never judge the channel by the appearance of Dover beach, so the question was asked sympathetically, "Was the crossing very rough?"

"No," said the passenger; "this is a personal matter." — London Globe.

Power of Praise

There is one thing which no man, however generously disposed, can give, but which every one, however poor, is bound to pay. This is praise. He cannot give it because it is not his own, since what is dependent for its very existence on something in another can never become to him a possession, nor can he justly withhold it when the presence of merit claims it as a consequence. — Washington Allston.

Let the Secret Slip

Queen Victoria once gave an important secret away without the slightest intention of doing so. During the Crimean crisis a lady known to the queen wrote and said that she was desirous of obtaining an appointment for her boy in the navy, but was afraid that affairs would not permit him to be given a post just then.
